PLAINTIFFS' REPLY BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF ITS RENEWED
 MOTION TO DISMISS DEFENDANT
 ROBERT PERRY'S
 COUNTERCLAIM

Date: August 10, 2009
 Time: 9:30 a.m.
 Judge: The Honorable George H. King

1     I. INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

2           In his Opposition to SparkNet's Motion to Dismiss Counterclaims
 3 ("Opposition"), defendant Robert Perry ("Perry") claims his conversion counterclaim 4 must survive as long as he pleads "the right to possession." (Opposition at 11:5-6).
 5 But, under New York law, which governs any and all claims arising under the 6 Consulting Agreement attached as Exhibit 1 to Perry's Counterclaim, Perry must allege 7 that he owned, possessed, or controlled the shares of stock he claims SparkNet 8 converted before his conversion claim arose. Perry cannot plead rights to shares 9 before his conversion claim arose, and, thus, cannot state a claim. Even if Perry has 10 properly pleaded conversion, his claim fails because, under New York law, when the 11 material facts asserted in a breach of contract claim are the same as those asserted in a 12 conversion claim, the conversion cause of action must be dismissed.

13           Moreover, SparkNet has not waived its right to challenge venue by filing this 14 lawsuit – which involves claims and issues distinct from the contract claims brought by 15 Perry – in the Central District of California. Perry's counterclaims all stem from 16 SparkNet's purported breach of the Consulting Agreement attached as Exhibit 1 to 17 Perry's Counterclaims; the parties specifically agreed to bring all claims arising from 18 the Consulting Agreement in New York, only; and the contract's choice of forum is 19 controlling and takes precedence. Perry has provided no reason to invalidate the 20 contract's forum selection clause. The Court should, therefore, dismiss Perry's 21 counterclaims for improper venue and require Perry to litigate them in New York, 22 where he resides.

23     II. ARGUMENT

24         A. Perry's Conversion Claim Fails Under New York Law

25             1. PERRY HAS NOT PLED THE REQUISITE ELEMENTS OF A 26                 CONVERSION CLAIM

27           Perry does not refute in his Opposition brief (because he cannot) that, pursuant 28 to the Consulting Agreement, New York law governs his conversion counterclaim. See
 REPLY BRIEF ISO OF MOTION TO DISMISS

1 *Guadagno v. E*Trade Bank*, 592 F. Supp. 2d 1263, 1269 (C.D. Cal. 2008) and 2 Counterclaim, Exh. 1, p.7 (¶ 8.8). He nonetheless cites to irrelevant California law<sup>1</sup> in 3 support of his claim and ignores the well-established authorities cited by SparkNet in 4 pages 5-6 of their Motion papers, which hold that a conversion claim cannot lie where, 5 as here, the plaintiff never had ownership, possession or control of the shares of stock 6 allegedly converted, but only had an alleged contractual entitlement to them. See, 7 Peters Griffin Woodward, Inc. v. WCSC, Inc., 88 A.D.2d 883, 45 N.Y.S.2d 599, 600
 8 (1982) (“The plaintiff has never had ownership, possession, or control of the money 9 constituting the June commissions. Therefore, no action in conversion may be brought 10 against WCSC or MMT on that theory. The plaintiff, of course, may seek to recover 11 those commissions from WCSC under the first cause for breach of contract.”); Fiorenti
 12 v. Central Emergency Physicians, PLLC, 305 A.D.2d 453, 762 N.Y.S.2d 402, 404
 13 (2003) (“The Supreme Court should have dismissed the plaintiffs’ cause of action 14 alleging conversion, since the plaintiffs never had title, possession or control of the 15 funds alleged to have been converted.”); Castaldi v. 39 Winfield Assoc., 30 A.D.3d 16 458, 458-59, 820 N.Y.S.2d 279 (2006).

17       Under New York law, to “maintain a claim for conversion, a plaintiff must 18 show: (1) the property subject to conversion is ‘a specific identifiable thing;’ (2) 19 plaintiff had ‘ownership, possession or control over the property’ before its 20 conversion; and (3) defendant ‘exercised an unauthorized dominion over the thing in

 22       <sup>1</sup> Although California law does not apply, the California authorities cited by Perry 23 show that Perry’s claim would fail under California law as well. In Burlesci v. Petersen, 68 Cal.App.4th 1062 (1998), the defendant held equipment owned by the 24 plaintiffs as a gratuitous bailee and refused to release it to them on demand claiming he 25 was entitled to hold the equipment as collateral for the plaintiffs’ debt. Id. at 1067.
 26 Clearly, unlike Perry, the plaintiffs in Burlesci owned the equipment before the 27 defendant allegedly converted it. Similarly, in Payne v. Elliott, 54 Cal. 339, 343 28 (1880), the plaintiff owned the shares of stock, but had transferred them to the defendant “in a fiduciary capacity...to hold in trust for the plaintiff.” In Mears v. Crocker First Nat. Bank, 84 Cal.App.2d 637 (1948), the plaintiff “was the owner and holder and entitled to the possession of” the shares of stock at issue. Id. at 639.
 Finally, in Carey v. Glenco Citrus Products, 235 Cal.App.2d 572, 580 (1965), the conversion claimant had title to the orange crop at issue before it was allegedly converted.

1 question, to the alteration of its condition or to the exclusion of the plaintiff's rights.””
 2 Moses v. Martin, 360 F.Supp.2d 533, 541 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) (citations omitted) 3 (emphasis added).

4 Perry has not denied (because he cannot) that he never had ownership, 5 possession or control of the shares of stock allegedly converted, nor has he refuted, 6 distinguished or otherwise dealt with the above-cited authorities which render this 7 undeniable fact fatal to his conversion claim.

8 2. UNDER NEW YORK LAW, A BREACH OF CONTRACT CLAIM MAY 9 NOT BE RECAST AS A CONVERSION CLAIM

10 Perry’s Opposition also completely ignores the wealth of New York law cited by 11 the SparkNet entities for the proposition that a claim of conversion cannot, as a matter
 12 of law, be predicated upon a breach of contract. See, Peters Griffin, 88 A.D.2d 883, 45 13 N.Y.S.2d at 600 (“However, an action for conversion cannot be validly maintained 14 where damages are merely being sought for breach of contract”); Fiorenti v. Central 15 Emergency Physicians, PLLC, 305 A.D.2d 453, 762 N.Y.S.2d at 404 (“To the extent 16 that the Supreme Court found that the bonuses due the plaintiffs were improperly 17 calculated pursuant to the employment agreements, such a finding establishes a breach 18 of contract, upon which a conversion claim cannot be predicated.”); MBL Life 19 Assurance Corp. v. 555 Realty Co., 240 A.D.2d 375, 658 N.Y.S.2d 122 (1997) (“It is 20 settled, however, that a claim for conversion cannot be predicated on a mere breach of 21 contract.”). Perry attempts to dispose of this well-established principle by claiming 22 that he is merely “pleading in the alternative.” Opposition, p.13. But under New York 23 law, when the material facts asserted in a breach of contract claim are the same as those 24 asserted in a conversion claim, the conversion cause of action must be dismissed.
 25 Wechsler v. Hunt Health Sys., Ltd., 330 F. Supp. 2d 383, 431 (S.D.N.Y. 2004). Perry 26 does not refute in his Opposition brief that the facts supporting his conversion claim 27 differ from the facts supporting his breach of contract claim.

1       The sole New York case relied upon by Perry in support of his conversion claim 2 is Moses v. Martin, 360 F.Supp.2d 533 (S.D.N.Y. 2004). In that case, the plaintiff 3 hired the defendants as her agents to handle all logistical aspects of her celebrity 4 styling business. The defendants were supposed to collect payments from clients and 5 remit the payments to plaintiff, less a twenty percent commission. The defendants 6 breached this agreement by not remitting the payments to plaintiff and lied to the 7 plaintiff, saying that her clients had not paid for their services. Thereafter, the 8 defendants provided advances to plaintiff and claimed that the plaintiff had to 9 reimburse the defendants for those advances. When the plaintiff discovered that her 10 clients had indeed been paying for her services and that her agents were pocketing the 11 money that was rightfully hers, she demanded that the defendants remit payment to her 12 but the defendants refused. Id. at 538-42. She sued for, among other things, breach of 13 contract, fraud and conversion. Citing Peters-Griffin, supra, the Court stated that an 14 action for conversion cannot be validly maintained where damages are merely being 15 sought for breach of contract. But, because the plaintiff had shown acts that were 16 “unlawful or wrongful as opposed to mere violations of contractual rights,” the court 17 found that the conversion claim was distinct from plaintiff’s breach of contract claim.
 18 Id. at 541-42; see also Fraser v. Doubleday & Co., 587 F.Supp. 1284, 1288 (S.D.N.Y.
 19 1984) (“[T]o sustain a conversion claim, a plaintiff must allege acts that are unlawful 20 or wrongful as distinguished from acts that are a mere violation of contractual rights.”).

21       In this case, unlike in Moses, there are no allegations that SparkNet engaged in a 22 pattern of deceiving Perry, and nor are there allegations that SparkNet made any false 23 or misleading representations to Perry regarding the shares of stock. Here, Perry 24 simply alleges that SparkComm and SparkHold converted SparkHold’s “stock, 25 wrongfully withholding it from and failing to convey it to Perry, in contravention of 26 Perry’s contract rights.” Counterclaim, ¶ 26 (emphasis added).

27       The facts at issue here are more similar to the facts in Peters Griffin, which was 28 discussed at length in SparkNet’s Motion, and Citadel Mgmt. Inc. v. Telesis Trust, Inc.,

1 123 F. Supp. 2d 133 (S.D.N.Y. 2000) ("Citadel"). In Citadel, the plaintiff loaned $11 2 million to the defendants in return for defendants making periodic interest payments, 3 assigning ownership of paintings to the plaintiff, and returning the money to the 4 plaintiff at the end of the contract's term. The defendants took the $11 million and then 5 failed to perform any of their obligations under the contract. In fact, the complaint 6 alleged that the defendants immediately transferred the plaintiff's funds out of the 7 plaintiff's account, failed to assign the paintings, failed to make any interest payments, 8 and failed to transfer the $11 million back to the plaintiff on the agreed-to date. Id. at 9 149. The court in Citadel nonetheless dismissed the plaintiff's conversion claim as 10 redundant because it sought compensation for the actions the defendants had taken 11 with the money which they possessed solely as a result of breaching the contract. The 12 court reasoned that any harm the plaintiff suffered from the defendants' actions 13 stemmed from the defendants' breach of their contractual obligations. Furthermore, the 14 court noted that the plaintiff would be fully compensated if it prevailed on its breach of 15 contract claim. Id. at 149-50. Therefore, the court found the conversion claim 16 duplicative and dismissed it.

17 For these reasons, and for the reasons set forth in SparkNet's moving papers, 18 Perry's Third Counterclaim for Conversion should be dismissed without leave to 19 amend.

20 B. THE COUNTERCLAIMS SHOULD BE DISMISSED FOR 21 IMPROPER VENUE

22 1. SPARKNET HAS NOT WAIVED THEIR VENUE CHALLENGE BY 23 BRINGING SUIT IN THE CENTRAL DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

24 SparkNet has not waived its objection as to improper venue on Plaintiff's 25 contract claims by filing their initial lawsuit for trademark infringement in the Central 26 District of California. This would be true even if the counterclaims were compulsory.
 27 For example in Publicis Comm v. True North Comm., Inc., 132 F.3d 363 (7th Cir. 1997) 28 ("Publicis Comm."), the plaintiff filed suit in a Chicago federal district court. The 1 defendant filed counterclaims, which included allegations that the plaintiff had violated

 2 an agreement entered by the parties. The agreement at issue contained a forum 3 selection clause whereby the parties selected Delaware as their chosen forum. On 4 appeal, the Seventh Circuit dismissed the counterclaim and held that an otherwise 5 compulsory counterclaim need not be pleaded in pending litigation when a forum 6 selection clause requires the parties to litigate the subject of the counterclaim in another 7 forum. Id. at 365-67; see also Tokio Marine & Fire Ins. Co. v. Nippon Express U.S.A.
 8 (Illinois), Inc., 118 F.Supp.2d 997, 1000 (C.D.Cal. 2000) (potentially duplicative 9 litigation insufficient to overcome strong policy favoring forum selection clauses). The 10 court stated:

11 By agreeing to litigate in Delaware all claims arising out of 12 requests under §1.1 of the ... agreement, True North promised 13 not to assert such claims in other forums whether or not they 14 would be 'compulsory' counterclaims, and Publicis promised 15 not to contend (in Delaware) that True North should have raised 16 the claim somewhere else. By presenting the claim in Chicago, 17 True North broke its promise. The district court should have 18 enforced the ... agreement by dismissing the counterclaim.

19 Id. at 366.

20 Likewise, here, SparkNet filed its trademark infringement suit in this Court; 21 Perry then filed counterclaims against SparkNet that are directly related to the 22 Consulting Agreement, which, as discussed above, contains a New York forum 23 selection clause. Even if the counterclaims are compulsory, which they are not,<sup>2</sup>

---

25 <sup>2</sup> Perry's argument in pages 8-9 of his Opposition regarding the supposed compulsory 26 nature of his counterclaims is a red herring. His counterclaims are not compulsory as 27 there is no logical relationship between SparkNet's trademark-related claims and 28 Perry's contract claims. SparkNet is suing Perry for his misuse of trademarks in a manner designed to cause consumer confusion. In contrast, Perry's counterclaims all relate to breaches of the Consulting Agreement and the alleged failure to transfer shares of stock. The factual and legal issues are not similar, and different evidence related to each set of claims.

1 pursuant to Publicis Comm., they are still governed by the Consulting Agreement's 2 forum selection clause.

3 The cases cited by Perry are inapposite. In Olberding v. Illinois Central Railway 4 Co., 346 U.S. 338, 340, 74 S.Ct. 83, 85 (1953), there is no mention of any 5 counterclaims, and there is no contract or forum selection clause at issue. In that case, 6 the plaintiff sought to use a state nonresident motorist statute to establish venue in a 7 federal court in the state where the accident occurred, neither plaintiff nor defendant 8 being residents of that state. The Court held the action was improperly laid in the 9 federal court, and that although an out-of-state driver is said to have consented to the 10 jurisdiction of the state courts, there is nothing to indicate that such a driver has waived 11 his federal venue rights. Id. at 341.

12 Competitive Technologies v. Fujitsu Ltd., 286 F. Supp. 2d 1118, 1142 (N.D.Cal.
 13 2003) is also inapplicable. There, the case was transferred from an Illinois court to the 14 Northern District of California, and following transfer, the plaintiff continued to 15 prosecute the action in the Northern District of California, and appeared before the 16 court on numerous occasions without ever asserting a lack of personal jurisdiction. Id.
 17 at 1141-42. A year later, the plaintiff moved to dismiss the defendant's counterclaims, 18 arguing for the first time that the Northern District of California lacked personal 19 jurisdiction over it. The court stated: "Competitive [the plaintiff] has provided no 20 authority in support of this argument and has not explained why it has never, in the 21 year since this case was transferred to the Northern District of California, brought a 22 motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction." Id. The court thus found that the 23 plaintiff waived his right to challenge personal jurisdiction. Notably, there was no 24 applicable forum selection clause in Competitive Technologies.

25 In cases that involve forum selection clauses, courts generally enforce the will of 26 the parties:

27 In general, we have held that a party that has consented to 28 personal jurisdiction when the party took some kind of affirmative act – accepting a forum selection clause, submitting

1 a claim, filing an action – that fairly invited the court to resolve 2 the dispute between the parties. By contrast, where a party has 3 filed a timely and unambiguous objection to the court’s 4 jurisdiction, we have concluded that the party has not consented 5 to jurisdiction.

6 SEC v. Ross, 504 F.3d 1130, 1149 (9th Cir. 2007). Perry and SparkNet freely 7 consented to the forum selection clause, which requires that all claims arising out of the 8 Consulting Agreement be brought in the courts sitting in the City of New York.
 9 SparkNet timely objected to venue in this court relating to Perry’s counterclaims, all of 10 which are based on an alleged breach of the Consulting Agreement. As Publicis
 11 Comm. and the Ross court indicate, there is no inconsistency in litigating SparkNet’s 12 trademark-related claims in this forum, while requiring Perry’s contract-based 13 counterclaims to be litigated in New York in accordance with the parties’ prior 14 agreement.

15 2. THE FORUM SELECTION CLAUSE IS MANDATORY AND EXCLUSIVE

16 The court’s decision in Cambridge Nutrition A.G. v. Fotheringham, 840 F. Supp.
 17 299, 301 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) supports a holding that New York is the exclusive forum for 18 disputes relating to the Consulting Agreement. The court in that case determined that 19 the following language supported the mandatory and exclusive nature of the clause at 20 issue: “This Agreement shall be governed by the laws of the State of New York, 21 U.S.A. All parties hereby submit to the jurisdiction of the courts of the state of New 22 York.” Id. The clause in the Consulting Agreement has similar language; both 23 agreements provide that they “shall be” governed by New York law and in both 24 agreements, the parties either “submit” or “irrevocably...consent” to the jurisdiction of 25 the New York courts. SparkNet respectfully submits that this Court should follow 26 Cambridge Nutrition and require Perry to litigate his contract-related counterclaims 27 exclusively in New York, as required by the parties’ agreement.

III. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons and for the reasons set forth in SparkNet’s moving papers, SparkNet respectfully requests that the Court dismiss Perry’s Counterclaim, in its entirety, because forum is proper in the New York courts, or, in the alternative, dismiss Perry’s Third Counterclaim for Conversion.
